Thieu Abolishes Local Elections

•The New York Times

Saigon — The South Vietnamese government, by executive decree, has abolished popular democratic election of officials at the most basic level — in the country's 10,775 hamlets.

Under the new system, which is going into effect now and will be complete within two months, nearly all the country's administrative officials, from the province chiefs down to the hamlet level, will be appointed.

The decree ends six years of popular election at the grassroots level of the hamlets. It was issued, without publicity, on Aug. 22 by Premier Tran Thien Khiem. It orders 44 province chiefs, who are military men appointed by President Nguyen Van Thieu, to reorganize local government and appoint all hamlet officials and finish the job in two months.

The new system calls for either two or three officials in each hamlet, depending on its population. They are the average Vietnamese citizen's closest contact with his government — the men he complains to, goes to when he needs help, or hears from when the government wants to enforce its laws.

To Be Appointed

At the next highest level, the village — villages in Vietnam are administrative groupings of hamlets, not villages in the American or European sense of the word — village chiefs and their staffs have been elected by provision of the South Vietnamese Constitution. But now, according to the premier's decree, their deputies and staffs will no longer be elected. They, too, will be appointed by the province chiefs.

In the space of a few months — since Thieu began ruling by decree in June — he has centralized power in his hands and through men appointed by him to a decree unknown here since the Americans came here in strength in the 1960's and gave South Vietnam the forms of democratic government and popular elections.

Since 1967 the country has been governed by an elected president and a two-chamber legislature. Thieu, who ran alone last October and won a reported 94.3% of the vote for his second term, controls a majority of the legislators in both houses but has been ruling by decree since June 27. On that night he wrested from the Senate authority to govern by fiat for six months in the fields of security, defense, economy and finance.

Being Weakened

But it is clear, from this latest decree as well as from earlier ones by Thieu that placed restrictions on the South Vietnamese press and stiffened the penalties for common crimes and for dereliction of duty, that the forms of democratic government are being weakened at a time when the United States is pulling troops out and, correspondingly, losing influence here.

President Thieu has been saying as much in recent speeches.

Thieu has often cited the extraordinary situation created by the Communist offensive that began at the end of last March as justification for restrictive measures. But the move to abolish election of hamlet officials and centralize local administration under the appointed province chiefs was in preparation even before the offensive.

An American government interpretation of the decree says, for example, "these changes have been in the wind for the past several months" were noted by the Americans in reports dated Feb. 28 and March 7.

As the 1972 State Fair drew to a close Wednesday, fair manager Henry Brandt characterized it as very successful and one of the smoothest and most accident-free on record.

IN TRIBUTE . . . the Olympic flag flies at half staff in Munich stadium.

Fair Sets Variety Of Records

The fair was also a record-breaker in other areas.

Brandt said Wednesday's estimated crowd total of 30,000 would bring the fair's total attendance to a new all-time high of 478,000.

That total is 11,000 over the record of 467,000 set last year.

The fair also set a record estimated at $180,000 for gross income on the midway. The old record, set in 1968 was $155,800.

The 1972 gross total was considerably higher than the $103,000 total attained by last year's problem-plagued midway.

Grandstand shows all "ran in the black" this year, Brandt said, for the first time in his eight years as fair manager.

Jean Imig of Valentine became the first woman to be named the Outstanding 4-H Exhibitor at the fair.

Rick Hartman of Wood River became the first competitor to win both the grand champion and reserve champion ribbons in the 4-H beef show.

This year was the first time that three women, Cindy Goldapp of Omaha, Jodi Huenink of Norris and Virginia Gergen of Geneva have taken the first three places in FFA sheep showmanship competition.

Specifically, it was recommended that a commission member initiate the test by submitting a request for payment of expenses. The request has to be processed through the office of State Treasurer Wayne Swanson, who would be expected to be governed by the attorney general's opinion that the law creating the commission is unconstitutional.

It was decided that Dr. Rogers would take the action, and that the law firm would act as legal counsel for him, not the commission.

Attending the meeting were William Dobler of Lincoln, commission chairman; Glen Ilgenfritz, Fremont; Marilu Ellerbrook, Bellevue; Dr. Leonard Skov, Kearney; and Dr. Rogers, all commission members. Lester Harsh of McCook was not present. One seat on the commission is vacant.

On Wednesday, a law firm retained by the Nebraska Association of Independent Colleges and University, told the commission a writ of mandamus action would be the best approach. The association is the chief advocate of the law.

The commission was formed by the 1972 law to administer the aid. The law allows the commission be given the power to administer the aid.

guerrilla organizations and, indirectly, the Arab nations, that they will be held accountable for the murders of the 11 Israeli athletes in Munich. After a four-hour emergency cabinet session, the government issued a statement declaring "Israel will persevere in her struggle against the terrorist organizations and will not absolve their accomplices from responsibility for terrorist actions." (More on Page 3.)

U.S. Takes Measures

Washington — The United States undertook urgent diplomatic efforts throughout the world and new security measures at home to curb international political terrorism following the attack by Palestinian guerrillas on the Israeli Olympic team in Munich. Acting on President Nixon's personal instructions, Secretary of State Rogers began preparations for consultations with foreign governments on formulating a collective security system.

Air Force Is Disputed

Orlando, Fla. — Lonnie D. Franks, the Air Force sergeant who first reported the unauthorized bombing of North Vietnam, disputed the Air Force's contention that Gen. John D. Lavelle acted alone in ordering the raids. Franks also said more than 200 air Force men were involved in falsifying the raids reports. (More on Page 22.)

Vietnamese government has abolished popular democratic election of officials at the most basic level — in the country's 10,775 hamlets. (More on Page 1.)

Price Controls Broadened

Washington — The government broadened its network of price controls and imposed a 2.5% ceiling on increases charged by law firms employing more than 60 persons. (More on Page 10.)

Partial Formula Offered

Washington — Great Britain offered a partial formula for drafting a new international treaty on hijacking that American officials hope might help overcome some of the most difficult diplomatic hurdles to the new treaty. Although the proposal provided delegates to an international conference in Washington with a new point for discussions, several delegates stressed there were still major obstacles in the way of an agreement.

McG Blames Egypt, Lebanon

Los Angeles — Sen. George McGovern said the governments of Egypt and Lebanon were to blame for the Arab terrorist assaults such as that which took the lives of the 11 Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games in Munich. (More on Page 3.)

Moscow Police Detain Over 50 Jews

Moscow (UPI) — Soviet police detained more than 50 Jews slaying of Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games. Jewish sources said Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov, developer of Russia's H-bomb and a leading champion of civil rights, was among those picked up.

The sources said Sakharov was among 40 Jewish men and 15 women taken to a sobering-up station, questioned and released without charges being placed against them.

There are numerous such stations throughout the city where persons under the influence of liquor are held until they sober up.

At least 40 uniformed police were at the embassy before the Jews arrived. They immediately forced the Jews into blue police buses which drove away.

Earlier, police barred a group of Moscow Jews from delivering through the Netherlands Embassy a message of condolence to Israeli's Premier Golda Meir.

The Lebanese Embassy was chosen for the demonstration, Jews said, because a number of Palestinian organizations are headquartered in Beirut.

The Soviet police arrived 15 minutes before the time scheduled for the demonstration and acted swiftly. As groups of Jews arrived they were grabbed and pushed aboard the buses. Although about 30 were detained, many others managed to evade police.

A copy of a letter the demonstrators planned to present to the embassy said: "The criminals from the Black September have found asylum on the territory of Lebanon. The responsibility for the bandits' action lies with the government of Lebanon."

"We demand with a all resoluteness that the organizers of the crime in Munich be brought to justice. We demand the immediate cessation of the Palestinian terrorist organizations' activities on Lebanese territory."

Among those detained were Ester and David Markish, the widow and son of a Jewish poet shot in a Stalin purge in 1952.

A delegation of four Jews had gone to the Moscow City Council during the day to seek permission for the demonstration. Permission apparently was refused. Demonstrations are not allowed in the Soviet Union unless officially organized or sanctioned.

The Netherlands Embassy was picked for delivering the condolence note because the Netherlands has represented Israeli interests in the Soviet Union since the break in Soviet-Israeli relations in 1967.

Agency Tells Of Overflight

Beirut (UPI) — Four Israeli Skyhawk jets violated Lebanese airspace Wednesday, flying at medium altitude over a number of border villages, the Palestine News Agency said.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

It is, as the movie said, a mad, mad, mad world in which we live. The bloody murder of 11 Israeli Olympic team hostages by Arab guerrillas is all and more that world leaders have said it is. It is dismaying, incredible, unbelievable, shocking and, finally, indescribable.

We make a mistake in referring to the situation as a guerrilla attack. Those Arabs who did this are not guerrillas but plain old murderers. Two questions come to mind for the world as we contemplate this terrible deed.

Did the German authorities do the right thing in shooting it out with the murderers? In the process of this, the 11 hostage were killed. Should the murderers have been allowed safe access to Egypt where they wanted to go?

German authorities say that the hostages faced certain death if allowed to take off with the Arab group. Israel Prime Minister Golda Meir reportedly has approved of the German efforts to kill the Arabs and free the hostages.

Perhaps that is the right way. Perhaps then the hijackings and other forms of violence so prevalent today would be curtailed. When the terrorists have to face certain death themselves, maybe they will be discouraged from the things they contemplate. Surely, such a system places hostages on notice that their lives are no longer worth a tinker's damn.

The decision to stop guerrillas even at the sacrifice of their hostages is a harsh policy and one we find hard to accept. If you are not a hostage, you might think otherwise but put yourself in a hostage's shoes and you may think differently.

You wonder even about the right of government to endanger the lives of innocent people for the sake of apprehending criminals. We might be wrong and maybe it is time to get tough at all costs but any policy that puts a cheap price on life is fraught with inhumanity.

The second question is the matter of Jewish-Arab relations in the Middle East. Here is an area of the world where the constant threat of war seems finally to have turned the corner in the other direction.

Significant events have taken place in the Middle East in recent months. Russia has been ousted from Egypt and relations between the two countries appear to be getting worse every day.

The Arab nations are looking to Western Europe for assistance and reportedly finding a cooperative spirit. Thus, a third force in that area besides the U.S. and Russia is being introduced. We may wonder about our allies aiding the Arabs but it is better than that than the Russians.

Also, Israel is said to have drawn up and submitted to Egypt and other Arab leaders a new peace proposal. The proposal returns to the Arab countries large areas of land won by Israel in the Six-Day War and seeks to neutralize other areas vital for the security of the Jewish state.

With Russia at least temporarily out of the picture and Israel strong with U.S. aid, the Jewish state can now afford to be a little more generous than it has been in the past. The Arab states have not jumped at the chance to make peace with Israel but at least there has been no automatic rejection of the new peace plan.

With Jordan along the Jordan River and Syria in the Golan Heights, Israel still has a substantial conflict to settle because most of those regions taken back in 1967 would remain at least under Israeli control. But perhaps even in these areas, the antagonists are becoming weary and a solution might be found.

What effect does the Arab guerrilla attack upon the Israeli Olympic team have upon the prospects for peace in the Middle East? Even though such attacks are not part of any official Arab government policy, they cannot help but strain relations between Jews and Arabs.

We can only hope that the strain is not enough to break the weak threads of peace that have been woven in the past few months. That would be to give the guerrillas the prize they sought and such is an unthinkable end to things.

RALPH C. DEANS

Corn Prices, Farm Votes In The Same Proportion

WASHINGTON — Optimism, like dew on the Middle West's ready-to-harvest corn crop, does not survive long in the farm belt. Still, a bullish outlook for certain commodities — wheat, soybeans, pork and beef — is bringing smiles to the faces of some farmers. A major reason for the boomlet, according to the Farm Journal, is that consumers are on a binge."

George McGovern has offered "a small wager that Nixon drops the farm belt this year." Some pundits would accept that bet with odds right now, on the ground that those smiles will turn into Nixon votes in two months' time. Others think that the deeper dissatisfaction of farmers on a number of counts is broad enough to cause the Republicans some problems.

The President gained points with his decision to exempt farmers from price controls and with the recent $750 million sale of grain to the Soviet Union. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz has lifted the administration's stock with his tough-talking defense of the rural constituency. But high interest rates, inflation, the growth of agribusiness, and the decline of family farming are matters of persistent worry.

Farmers are notorious for voting out candidates of the party in power when they are disgruntled about conditions. The Republicans lost five grain-belt House seats in the 1970 elections. And seven GOP incumbents, three senators and four representatives, face strong challenges this year. How they fare at the polls may well depend on the price of corn.

Despite the rise in other prices, corn is stuck at about $1.28 a bushel on Chicago grain markets — less in other parts

Compared with other blocs among the voters, farmers are a small and dwindling group. According to the Census Bureau, the American farm population fell from over 15 million in 1960 to less than 10 million in 1970. Like every other bloc, though, farmers can constitute an important swing vote in several states. Politicians neglect them, and their concern over corn prices, at their peril.

Mileage Check

Hitching Ban Arbitrary

There are still hitchhikers on Lincoln streets, although not nearly so many since the Lincoln Police Department decided near the end of July to enforce the city's anti-hitchhiking ordinance.

That crackdown resulted in protests by a scattering of youths in the city and has now generated an effort by a group of students to draft and have adopted by the City Council an ordinance which would permit people to hitchhike in Lincoln under certain conditions. The proposed ordinance was directed to the city law, police and traffic departments by Councilwoman Helen Boosalis, who said "the law we have in effect right now is a rather arbitrary one."

Indeed it is. The practical effect of a total ban on hitchhiking is to inconvenience people, nothing more.

In considering hitchhiking we deal with a couple of general assumptions. One is that it is a major mode of transportation for many people, especially students, pretty direct from point to point and without cost. Another is that hitchhiking is entirely a voluntary relationship between the hitcher and the driver. Nobody has to stop in response to an outstretched thumb.

Any type of assault upon one of the parties by the other should not be a factor in determining whether or not hitchhiking is contrary to the public good because ugly incidents can happen any time, any place in public and they haven't happened often enough in a hitchhiking relationship to justify a total ban on hitching.

Hitchhiking as an accident hazard is another question. People standing in the streets or sudden movements by vehicles stopping for hitchers add to the likelihood of an accident.

The proposed ordinance, however, copes with the accident hazard angle. It designates certain business districts and heavily traveled streets as out of bounds for would-be hitchhikers and it would require hitchhikers and drivers alike to adhere to a code of specific safety requirements. Perhaps the safety code is too cumbersome as proposed to enforce adequately, but the ordinance is worthy of serious study by the city departments and the council.

Certainly hitchhiking in some form should be allowed. What is important is that city government take the attitude of helping people to get along, rather than trying to inconvenience them.

Victim Of The Bureaucracy

The suspension, at least temporarily, of NOVA, the University of Nebraska's pioneering program which gives college credit for off-campus social action and anti-poverty work, points up how apt government is to foul its own inventions.

Last week ACTION, the federal agency which coordinates the various volunteer programs — such as NOVA, the Peace Corps and VISTA — told NU officials that it had decided not to fund NOVA at least until January. Theodore Ernst, NU's NOVA director, said ACTION wants the university to revise the entire program and resubmit it in October, even though students had been recruited to begin their work in low-income communities across Nebraska this month.

The hardship placed on those students who were called back is perhaps the result of the lack of adequate advance planning at the local level and a breakdown of communications between the federal agency and NOVA. That hardship is only part of the story.

Perhaps NOVA was too loosely structured to suit the bureaucrats who must rely on hard plans and hard results to justify requests to Congress for money.

But the success of the NOVA program in its first year, while statistically hard to evaluate, was deemed impressive by the people at NU who participated in and ran the program.

There is no attempt to attach any particular blame anywhere. We merely point out that the demands of the bureaucratic structure stifle the ability of volunteers on the line to serve people who need help.

JAMES RESTON

Olympic Tragedy Turns Thoughts To Protection; Ammunition-Seeding Would Be Partial Answer

(Editor's Note: In Mr. Reston's column yesterday on this page, discussing the presidential candidates' political position with labor, one paragraph was garbled. The corrected paragraph reads as follows:

"On Meany's side, this is a personal and philosophic difference which was probably irreconcilable even before the McGovern people cut down labor's power at the Democratic nominating convention. Meany simply doesn't trust McGovern, doesn't like his defense, war or welfare policies, and actually hates the noisy and hairy demonstrators who have gone into the streets against President Nixon."

Going for McGovern is that fact that, as one reporter put it, "He speaks the language (of farmers). He co-sponsors lots of farm legislation." The South Dakotan has pledged to raise the price of corn to $1.80 under existing laws. President Nixon's answer favors price supports and direct subsidies for farmers.

Also, McGovern is a midwesterner himself. But then, so was Hubert Humphrey in the last presidential election. Nixon carried 10 of the 12 midwestern states in 1968 and piled up big majorities in areas where feed-grain farming is predominant. Humphrey won Michigan and his native Minnesota.

Compared with other blocs among the voters, farmers are a small and dwindling group. According to the Census Bureau, the American farm population fell from over 15 million in 1960 to less than 10 million in 1970. Like every other bloc, though, farmers can constitute an important swing vote in several states. Politicians neglect them, and their concern over corn prices, at their peril.

The present history of American presidential politics has been influenced, if not determined, by deranged minds. One man takes the life of John Kennedy, another the life of his brother, Robert, a third silences the voice of Martin Luther King. A fourth changes the course of the 1972 American election by putting a bullet in the spine of George Wallace, and every commercial airplane is at the mercy, if that is the word, of any tormented skyjacker across the aisle.

The problem is not that mankind is incorrigibly villainous, or that it is indifferent to this iniquitous and ruinous slaughtering and murdering, but that the majority has not been able to devise ways of controlling the maniacal and even nonsensical acts of deranged agitators and dunces.

The philosophers, politicians and statesmen have all tried to deal with what is obviously an iniquitous and ruinous problem, without success. Even the Soviet Union, which puts more stress on order than any other society in the world, has just refused to go along with an international convention that would require all signatory nations to suspend their service with any other nation that did not punish or extradite airplane hijackers or saboteurs.

WASHINGTON — The tragedy at the Olympic games is just the latest reminder that there is now a kind of madness in the world. A lunatic strain of anarchy that hinders the peace and order of mankind.

The paradox of contemporary history is fairly plain: At one and the same time, there are hopeful signs that the majority of the human race is just beginning to see that the progress of man requires the cooperation of men and women of all nations, but still the majority exists with the tyranny of the minority.

The present history of American presidential politics has been influenced, if not determined, by deranged minds. One man takes the life of John Kennedy, another the life of his brother, Robert, a third silences the voice of Martin Luther King. A fourth changes the course of the 1972 American election by putting radioactive tracers such as Cobalt 60, which could easily be picked up by portable detectors in the crowd or even trigger an alarm system in banks, airport baggage areas, or post offices.

This idea was proposed during the Warren Commission inquiry into the Kennedy assassination. Later, the Rand Corporation urged experimentation with this notion on May 5, 1966. It was repeatedly brought up during the congressional hearings on gun control since then, but very little has been done to bring the ammunition seeding proposal into operation.

There are obvious difficulties. There are now over 90 million firearms in this country — over one and a half per family. The number of handguns was increasing, until the recent legislation against "Saturday Night Specials," at an alarming rate, more than 2.5 million a year.

Vast quantities of non-seeded ammunition and explosive detonating caps are on hand in this country, and without an international agreement to seed ammunition with radioactive tracers, foreign ammunition could obviously be purchased. Also, handling radioactive ammunition and explosive caps could be an expensive business, dangerous to the health of ammunition workers unless special precautions were taken.

Nevertheless, any preventive innovation, no matter how imperfect, is worth trying to deal with the political anarchy that killed the Kennedys, Martin Luther King, and the Israelis.

LA VERA HASSLER

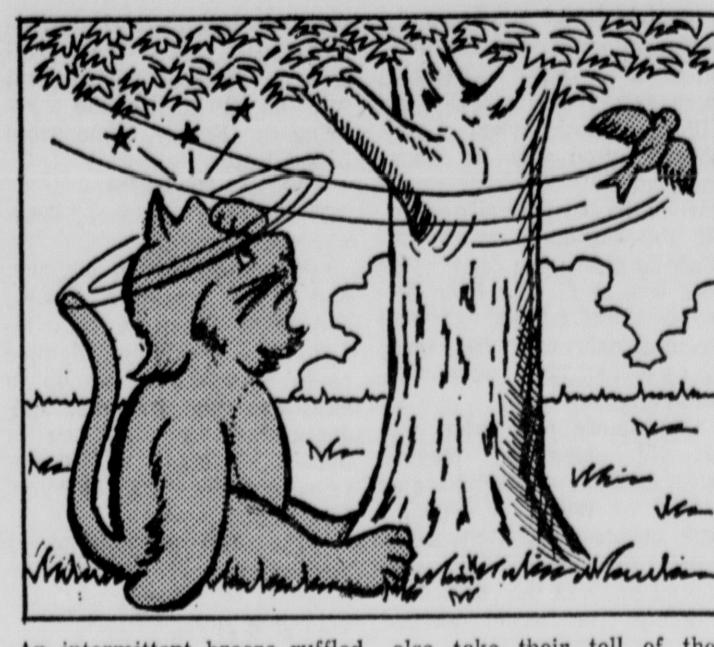

Patchwork Prairie Country

Sometimes it seems the more we change and try to come up with an original idea, it has already been tried. I am thinking about weddings. There are those that are held in meadows, under bridges and by streams. Having the service held out in the great open spaces with nature furnishing all the backdrop has a certain "new mod thing" about it that a number of young people want.

Now, I suppose there was a time when a pioneer girl and her intended stood in a meadow with the parson, joining hands as the wagon train moved westward, wishing their service could be held in a church. But no, they had many miles to go before they reached the settlement and the small rough-hewn church. The streams were here, the mountains and forests . . . all were used as a background for weddings. Field bouquets that so many weddings include today were easily come by in pioneer days . . . the prairie daisies, asters or lupines.

Wedding dresses, too, have come the full circle for I have seen them made of unbleached muslin, ruffled, tucked or edged in brilliant trim. So really when we think we are trying something novel and new, it has already been tried and isn't new, at all.

Early this morning, just before dawn usually breaks, I heard the sound of thunder rumbling in the distance. Slowly I could hear the approaching rain move closer. Finally I heard the rustle of the milo leaves as it came across the field and I knew it was very close. The thunder was much louder but controlled . . . not of the violent kind heard in mid-summer. I arose and closed the windows. I saw the gentle rain misting the distant hills and meadows.

also take their toll of them but it seems to me they could do much better. A steady diet of crickets would eliminate them much faster. No doubt birds enjoy variety in their food intake, too.

We have no cats of our own but a neighbor's cat spends many hours in our orchard and prowling up and down our lane. I watched it yesterday as it snuggled close to the trunk of a poplar tree, hiding for a bird that it saw hopping about in the lower branches.

I saw the cat's tail twitch as it silently waited. Then suddenly there was a great thrashing about of the branches. The cat did an unrehearsed ballet and a very clumsy one, at that. I saw the bird fly quickly from the mass of twisting branches and fluttering leaves. I think the cat must have banged its skull against the trunk of the tree for it came out of the foray second best, limping all the way down the lane.

It hasn't been back thus far today so perhaps it has decided home is best.

Letters To The Editor

Brevity in letters is requested but length in them will have no bearing on publication. Writers are advised that needless details and repetitious material be omitted. Letters should be brief and to the point of letters. Letters containing complaints from one person or the same subject may be rejected. Caril Fugate

Littleton, Colo.

I am quite certain that "Growing Up In Prison" has accomplished just what it was intended to accomplish and that is the release of Caril Fugate.

Even while watching the broadcast, old feelings of horror and fear of that hideous week in January of 1958 were brought to the surface again.

I was 16 and growing up in Lincoln at the time and while I knew none of their victims, I could easily relate to Carol King. I can quickly recall the utter terror by which the people of Lincoln seemed to be drawn together. I thought to myself, has it been almost 15 years? It seems like only yesterday when we heard the hideous details of the Jensen-King slayings and were held in indescribable terror as the bloody trail was uncovered and the wanton, useless killings of 11 people were discovered.

NOISE: I love the excited voices of people, the animal sounds, the rhythmic roar of the racing cars, and the delightful music from the merry-go-round. However, the train whistle blasting next to the outdoor auditorium seems unnecessary. There are many good programs there, and the 10:30 church service was so impressive. The united response to John 3:16 was tremendous. But here come the trains with their shrill whoo-ee and black smoke drifting into the auditorium.

BEST LAUGH: The samples of "Go Big Red" toilet tissue!

NOSTALGIA: The pitch for fancy vegetable cutters.

Delightful! One change, though — not a sucker every minute;

more like 20 a minute.

THANKS: For the excellent coverage of the fair by the 4-H Department.

Sickly Sister Gives Health Tips

By ROBERT PETERSON

Question: — "Why is it that the sickest people are often the most vocal on ways of keeping healthy? My wife's sister has what they call 'delicate health.' But, oh, boy, does she know everything. She warns us against alcohol, tobacco, aspirin, nose drops, saccharin, jogging, and wet feet. She tells everyone to eat fresh fruits and green vegetables, cautions us about frozen foods and canned goods, aluminum utensils, etc. My wife and I don't pay any attention to these things and enjoy perfect health, while she stays indoors most of the time resting up and nursing a string of ailments. What gives?"

Campbell Charms Fans At State Fair

By LIANE WETTERER
Star Staff Writer

All-American, super-gentle, super-musician . . . that's Glen Campbell.

He's got a style all his own. It's not urban. It's thinner, kind of country in flavor but with a touch of rock.

That shy, easy-going six-footer from Delight, Ark., charmed the closing night of some 5,500 at the 1972 Nebraska State Fair plumb outta their sets.

It should be easy to describe him. He's a country boy who made a fortune out of singing country music.

Most people remember him from either his television shows or his top recordings or both. But there's something about his relaxed stage presence and his wide, country-boy grin that makes a personal appearance something different.

He's probably one of the few entertainers who can almost throw a hip out of joint doing an Elvis imitation, show off some fancy pickin', sing a few more songs and still wind up without a strand of hair out of place.

Backed by the 20-man Warren Bills orchestra, Campbell got off to a slow start, straining for both notes and volume in "More" and "Sweet Dreams Baby."

Gov. Wallace To Be Chairman For Governors

(C) Washington Star-News
Hilton Head Island, S.C. — The Southern Governors Conference Wednesday paid tribute to the political standing of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace and elected him its chairman.

Wallace was chosen by the 19-governor group after South Carolina Gov. John C. West, the chairman-designate, stepped aside, saying that the crippled governor had "given more than any other American, physically, emotionally and mentally," a merger.

Although Wallace supporters had been working on the move for days, Wallace, wounded in an assassination attempt while campaigning for president at Laurel, Md., said, "I did not seek the honor. I do appreciate it."

The conference also voted to hold its 39th annual meeting next year in Alabama at Wallace's invitation. The southern governors have not met there since 1955.

Elected vice chairman was a black republican, Gov. Melvin H. Evans of the Virgin Islands.

Expulsion Is Called 'Shameful'

Lusaka, Zambia (UPI) — President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia Wednesday described Uganda's action in expelling Asians as "shameful."

Speaking to a group of visiting Scandinavian newsmen, the Zambian president said, "what is happening

The band, playing especially well Wednesday night, helped him through some pretty rough spots. Several times Campbell's songs seemed to end without that familiar high tenor finale. Instead, he kind of crooked them off on an easy, low-pitched note.

He was also completely out of character in a jazz-blues number, but promised his audience beforehand they wouldn't see much of it so he'd "do it early and get it out of the way."

Campbell isn't much of a stand-up singer like Tom Jones or Frank Sinatra, but give him a banjo or guitar and he's right at home.

The tunes he played really well are also those he's probably sung thousands of times — "Try a Little Kindness," "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," and "Gentle on My Mind."

His rendition of "He Ain't Heavy, He's My Brother" left his audience spellbound.

Then, of course no personal appearance could be complete without a bit of pure pickin' and strummin'. True to form, Campbell proved the hand is quicker than the eye.

He made only one big mistake — bringing 18-year-old Carl Jackson of Louisville, Miss., into the spotlight. Campbell is good, but Jackson was fantastic on the banjo.

LOMR Advisory Officers Elected

Sally Van Zandt was elected chairman of the newly appointed Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation advisory board at their organizational meeting Wednesday night.

Other officers elected were: Paul Owen, vice-chairman; Mildred Brown, secretary; and Jim Leestma, member-at-large.

The officers will hold their positions until the first week in January when new elections will be held.

The new board members will spend a day of orientation to the various projects and aspects of the LOMR program Thursday, Sept. 14, or Friday, Sept. 15.

The board was advised of the status of the five LOMR programs and the director of each program brought the group up to date with regard to program activities.

It was also decided Wednesday night that upon the receipt of a written request by the county commissioners the board would begin the process of screening applications for the position of executive director left open by the dismissal of former director John Lucas.

Robbers Kill 8 Americans In Golf Course Clubhouse

Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas, V. I. (UPI) — Eight Americans were shot to death and three other persons injured Wednesday when robbers burst into the lobby of a plush golf course clubhouse on St. Croix, the acting governor of U.S. territory said.

Acting Gov. David Maas said the identities of the victims were not immediately known.

South Vietnamese Lose Key Position On Hilltop

Saigon (UPI) — Communist forces shovelled South Vietnamese defenders from a key hilltop position south of Da Nang and four waves of U.S. B-52 bombers were called in to pound the surrounding area, military and field reports said Thursday.

The B-52s hit in an arc from 33 miles southwest to 42 miles southeast of Da Nang against Communist troop concentrations in and below the Que Son Valley, the U.S. Command said.

Allied officers said a Viet Cong force stormed and overran Hill 211 two miles north of Tien Phouc district capital, 38 miles south of Da Nang.

The Communists, blasting through barbed wire with Bangalore torpedoes, stormed the key government hilltop and their gunners shot up 11 South Vietnamese helicopters trying to fly in reinforcements.

At Quang Tri, 404 miles north of Saigon, North Vietnamese gunners Wednesday pounded marines with 860 artillery and mortar rounds but lost 102 men killed in ground contacts with South Vietnamese troops, the Saigon command said. Military spokesmen said seven marines were killed and 20 wounded in the fighting.

Tuition Tax Credits Called 'Dangerous'

Washington (UPI) — Organized labor Wednesday attacked proposed tax credits for private school tuition as "an extremely dangerous precedent," but a spokesman for Roman Catholic laymen supported them as necessary to preserve nonpublic schools.

Audrey J. Biemiller of the AFL-CIO and John J. Murray of the American Federation of Teachers, an AFL-CIO affiliate, urged the House Ways and Means Committee to reject the so-called "public and private education assistance act."

The measure, introduced by Reps. Hugh Carey, D-N.Y., and Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., committee chairman, would combine a tax credit of up to $200 per private school pupil per year with a $2.2 billion a year plan of federal aid to public schools.

The massive public school aid plan, which carries a permanent $2.2 billion a year authorization, would be financed from a trust fund made up of general tax revenues and would give states federal matching grants of 50% of the cost of public education.

"The tax credit provision would simply amount to the addition of a new tax loophole," Biemiller testified. "Of perhaps even greater significance, it establishes an extremely dangerous precedent of providing tax relief to a particular group solely because this group chooses not to use a particular public service."

Murray questioned the constitutionality of subsidizing private school tuition, which the committee estimated would result in an annual revenue loss to the government of $584 million, but which the administration testified earlier would total nearly $1 billion a year.

The administration has supported a form of tax credits for private school tuition but said some plan of replacing the lost revenue should accompany the program.

H. G. Rountree, president of the National Council of Catholic Laity, told the panel that "nonpublic school parents, in frustration bordering on despair, have turned to you for some assistance through tax relief."

Rountree acknowledged that without some federal help all nonpublic schools would not close down at once but he warned that "the steady tide of erosion that is taking place indicates that unless it can be turned back, in five more years, the only private schools which will be left will be those for the rich and wealthy only."

A spokesman for the owner of the course said four of the dead were tourists, two of the dead had been tentatively identified as golf course employees, and the other two victims were electricians working at the course.

The golf course, part of Rockresorts, Inc., is owned by Laurance Rockefeller and his brother David, head of the shooting. They used automatic weapons on their victims and wore green fatigues, he said.

Maas said a massive manhunt was launched to capture the killers, who cleaned out the clubhouse's cash supply and looted the victims' pockets before fleeing into the rugged, uninhabited terrain surrounding the plush resort.

No identification was given for the other victims.

In St. Thomas, Maas said the shootings occurred shortly after 4 p.m. at the Fountain Valley Golf Club on the neighboring island of St. Croix, 50 miles south of Charlotte Amalie.

Ronald Tonkin, the territory's attorney general, said "four or five" men did the

"To my knowledge, all of those killed were Americans — some were golfers, some were employees and some were workmen on the premises, I'm told, but I don't have a breakdown on who's who yet," he said.

Maas was coordinating the search from his office in Charlotte Amalie, capital of the Virgin Islands.

Gov. Melvin H. Evans, who had been attending the Southern Governor's Conference at Hilton Head, S.C., was en route to St. Croix, Maas said, to personally conduct the investigation and the search for the killers.

"This is absolutely the worst thing that has ever happened in the Virgin Islands," said Maas. "These men will be caught. We believe they fled the scene on foot, but we are sketchy on details because, obviously, the witnesses got out of there when the shooting started and we're having to backtrack and round everyone up to make sense out of what happened out there."

Maas said about 50 St. Croix and St. Thomas police officers as well as marshals from the attorney general's office were involved in a sweep through the thick brushlands surrounding the large course.

Alternative State School Aid Plans Expected To Be Ready By End Of Month, Warner Says

By DON WALTON

Star Staff Writer

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly Wednesday said proposed bills offering alternative plans for increasing state aid to schools should be drafted and ready for public inspection before the end of the month.

Warner's state aid study committee will then hit the road, taking the various proposals to public hearings in perhaps seven or eight communities throughout the state.

After testing the reaction of citizens, Warner said, the committee will make its own recommendations for consideration by the 1973 Legislature.

"I think it is important that the bills be presented as early as possible," Warner told his committee and representatives of a number of citizens groups at a meeting at the Statehouse.

"Delays would only lessen the probability of successful passage" of increased state aid next year.

Warner has guided state aid hikes through the last two legislative sessions only to see them wiped out by Gov. J. James Exon's veto powers.

But the governor is developing his own state aid plan for consideration in 1973.

There will be "a degree of competition" between the legislative and executive branches over the issue, Warner said, but that is natural as will be the competition among senators and education groups.

That kind of conflict is part of "the normal legislative process," Warner said.

Warner believes the debate over education financing has reached the point . . . where the need for change is fairly well accepted."

The remaining questions are "what change should be made . . . when . . . and at what pace it should be implemented," he said.

Increased state financial aid for the public schools would shift tax dollars from the local property tax base to the schools should be explored.

In a discussion outline distributed at Wednesday's meeting, Warner said the committee recognizes "the fact that the present school finance system is not equitable to all taxpayers and does not provide an equal number of dollars per pupil at the same mill levy for all students."

Participants were asked to consider whether the constitutional prohibition against a state property tax should be lifted and whether local income or sales tax support for the schools should be explored.

As it moves toward the development of state aid bills, the committee was asked to consider a position paper drafted by an ad hoc committee composed of representatives of the Nebraska State School Boards Association, the Nebraska Parent-Teacher Assn., the Nebraska State Education Assn., and the Nebraska Council of School Administrators.

The local school district must have the option to make a financial effort greater than the minimum program that the state support system provides," the position paper stated.

Curriculum control should remain within the province of the local districts, it was stated.

John Haynes, an aide to Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson, briefed the committee and other representatives on the details of Minnesota's tax reform and education financing program adopted in 1971.

Minnesota raised the level of state support for the schools from 43% to 70%.

While Minnesota increased its sales, income and excise (cigarettes and liquor) taxes, Haynes said, it reduced average school district property tax levies by about 20%.

The average total property tax reduction in the state was 11%, Haynes said, and the outlook is for "property tax stability" in the future.

Two of the youths were charged Wednesday in Lancaster County Court in connection with a burglary at 2917 No. 44th, and others were being referred to Juvenile Court.

David G. Bowers, 17, of 5410 Randolph was charged with burglary while Michael A. Shade, 19, of 6121 Whittier, was charged with a high-grade misdemeanor offense of being an accessory after the fact in connection with the burglary at 2917 No. 44th. Preliminary hearings for both youths were set Sept. 20.

According to police reports, three bike frames, three rolls of tan paper, fishing tackle box and other items were recovered from an abandoned storm cellar north of 35th and Cornhusker while a television set, electric drill, hand saws, multi-band radio, airplane propeller, fishing equipment and other items were found in the basement of the home of two of the youths.

Nixon Administration Asks Benefits Cut In Reform Bill

Washington (AP) — The Nixon administration has asked the Senate Finance Committee to drop several of the Social Security benefits it has included in the welfare reform bill. Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., reported Wednesday.

He said the request was made in the light of the cost of the 20% across-the-board Social Security increase voted by Congress in separate legislation last June.

Long said his panel was considering the request but had reached no conclusions.

One provision which the administration wants deleted would provide a special $200

ICC Denies Rail Request For Interim Rate Increase

Washington (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission Wednesday denied a request by the nation's railroads to impose interim increases in protective service charges on the shipment of fresh and frozen commodities, effective Oct. 7.

Had the request been granted, the interim increases would have added approximately 25% to the protective service charges on the shipment of fresh perishables and 15% on frozen perishables and $20 per trailer or container as a surcharge on shipments moving in piggy back operations.

Protective service charges constitute the revenue the railroads receive for providing protection from heat or cold to perishable commodities. In their petition for the increase, the carriers said they lost $730 million collective during 1971 on protective services.

The railroads had made the request for the increase in the petition filed with the ICC on Aug. 25.

In denying the railroad's request for the additional charges on Oct. 7, the commission did authorize them to publish the increases on at least 30 days notice, but with an effective date no earlier than Nov. 6. In any event, the commission said any such request would be subject to protest by the public.

Ag Dept. Eyed For Consumer Protection Unit

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan said Wednesday he has contacted the State Department of Agriculture concerning its willingness to take on responsibilities for a consumer protection agency.

Maresh said Director Glenn Kreuscher indicated he may be agreeable to the idea, since his office has already gotten into the consumer protection field with its supermarket and restaurant inspection program and the weights and measures enforcement.

Originally, Maresh had proposed the office be put under the attorney general. However, Attorney General Clarence A. H. Meyer indicated a reluctance to take on the responsibility, because the field involves more than just legal work.

Food Price Freeze Ended

Rome (AP) — The government, bowing to pressures from shopkeepers, Wednesday night lifted the 10-day-old freeze on food prices imposed in the Rome area.

Rome's prefect, the central government representative here, announced that a committee of merchants and regional officials will be formed to set fixed food prices in the province.

The freeze, originally imposed for 60 days, set off a wave of protests by butchers, grocers and fruit vendors, and sparked clashes between merchants and police.

Land For Plant Cost $300,000

The Addressograph-Multigraph Corp. paid approximately $300,000 for the 227-acre tract northwest of Lincoln on which the company will build a plant, according to revenue stamps on the deed of sale.

Listed as sellers were George Cook, local contractor, and Mrs. Cook.

The company plans a one-story plant which will employ about 250 persons by the fall of 1973.

Price Commission Clamps Down On Fee Hikes By Large Law Firms

Washington (AP) — The Price Commission decided Wednesday to clamp a 2.5% ceiling on increases in fees by large law firms with 60 or more employees.

In addition, the commission said it is watching other professional services for inflationary tendencies, but the agency already has ruled out imposing a proposed 3% ceiling on other services.

Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson said the action on legal fees followed studies showing that the cost of legal services jumped 13% from June of 1971 to June 1972.

It was the second major area of professional services to be affected by a price ceiling.

Doctors, dentists and noninstitutional providers of health services already are subject to a 2.5% annual ceiling on increased fees.

Last week Grayson indicated that the commission had decided against putting a 3% ceiling on increases in the cost of services generally.

As for large law firms, the new ceiling applies to increases in legal fees for a 12-month period beginning last Nov. 14. It covers each succeeding 12-month period.

The commission said that large law firms which already have raised legal fees above the allowable ceiling will not be permitted further increases until the excess is worked off.

For example, if a law firm has already raised its fees by 5%, it is barred from increasing fees until two years from Nov. 14, 1971.

Heart, Lung Disease Bill Is Sent To Nixon

Washington (AP) — The Senate sent to President Nixon Wednesday a $1.38 billion bill to mount a greatly stepped-up attack on heart, stroke and lung diseases.

The effort would be handled by the National Institutes of Health, in Bethesda, Md., which already conducts substantial research in the field.

However, the bill calls for a sharply increased research and training effort.

Concentrated Effort Set To Slow Traffic Deaths

By United Press International

Nebraska drivers may soon feel the pinch of a concentrated effort designed to at least slow down the mounting highway slaughter.

Gov. J. J. Exon Wednesday mandated his Highway Traffic Safety Advisory Committee to have in hand by next week suggestions for use in the effort.

One suggestion he specifically asked the committee to study was an order to the State Patrol to stop the issuance of warning tickets for moving violations such as speeding.

The action resulted from a new record of 13 fatalities set over the Labor Day weekend. Officials attributed all of them to "some type of driver error."

The State Accident Records Bureau said the new mark tops any other record set during any previous holiday period in Nebraska and compares to one last Labor Day and five the year before.

In addition, the state has recorded so far this year 317 deaths on the highways, which is ahead of the 301 killed by the same date last year—which ended with an all-time annual death count record.

Exon noted during his term in office he has been regularly involved in traffic safety efforts.

"But despite all our efforts . . . we're just not getting the job done," he said.

He also termed the problem so serious that he may tap the governor's emergency fund to aid in the effort if it is determined money can be of any help.

"I feel this problem is so serious that I would definitely consider employing some of the money of the governor's emergency fund," he said.

Col. James E. Kruger, State Patrol superintendent, however, raised objections to the suggested dropping of warning tickets.

Their use, he said, is a means of allowing an im-individual officer some leeway in handling particular situations. He also said he doubted the courts and prosecuting attorneys would go along with such a crackdown.

Other members of the advisory committee disagreed.

"I think it's time to take the gloves off and get tough," said Tom Ryan, chief of the Traffic Records Bureau.

Kruger said in his opinion more could be done if additional officers were put on the roads by the patrol.

"We need people," he said, "and I definitely feel this would have a deterrent impact."

Exon, however, said while he would support a legislative bid for more money to hire officers, that would not help in solving the immediate problem facing Nebraska during the next four months.

Kruger also said such an effort would destroy respect for law enforcement officers.

"Something like this would have a negative effect on our enforcement," he said. "We want and need public support."

Also brought out was a concentrated public education program to be operative by October.

State Motor Vehicles Director John Sullivan said his agency has been developing "the most dynamic public education program in the nation" on highway safety.

Others suggested those attending University of Nebraska football games be subjected to highway safety programs.

Exon said he would discuss the possibility of having half-time safety presentations with university officials and also suggested the effort be extended down to the high school level.

Elizabeth, N.J. (UPI) — A fire believed started by unsuccessful safecrackers gutted the Tomlinson Refrigeration and Supply Co.

FEMALE IBEX . . . springs from crate as zoo officials observe.

Male Ibex Doesn't Like Omaha Zoo

Omaha (AP) — Goats aren't supposed to be dumb, contends Dr. Lee Simmons, Henry Doorly Zoo director.

But he admits that what happened Wednesday at the zoo left him wondering—and worrying a bit.

When it was time to uncrate the zoo's newest and one of its most prized acquisitions, a pair of Nubian Ibex, the problem arose. Ibex are the only goats found in Africa.

First the door was lifted on the crate containing the female ibex. She jumped out and pranced around with graceful, lacy-like strides to show off her tawny brown coat and hide the fact she earlier knocked off one of her horns.

Then the gate went up on the crate of the 3-year-old male.

He charged across the grassy pen right into a wire fence.

The ibex, its nose cut slightly, staggered and fell, got up, tried again and went down again.

Dr. Simmons and Dr. William Russell, zoo veterinarian, examined the ibex. There apparently were no broken bones, the animal was breathing well and its heart beat was regular. But it still was punchy.

Food Stamp Case Probe Requested

Scottsbluff (AP) — Steve Swihart, an attorney for Panhandle Legal Services in Scottsbluff, has asked the Scotts Bluff County commissioners to investigate the alleged denial of immediate purchase of food stamps to an unnamed family last month by the county welfare department.

Stan Huth, welfare department director, told the commissioners the persons asked for aid to the disabled and displayed a doctor's statement which recommended that a neurosurgeon be consulted. But, Huth said, they did not have the recommended report in their possession. He said they walked out of the office before all necessary information could be obtained.

Swihart contended that an emergency food stamp purchase was requested and said he feels welfare office work is not being properly handled in some cases.

Huth said his office is trying to get aid to persons who are eligible "but for about the last six months it seems we're doing everything wrong because we don't find certain people eligible. Therefore, there is continuous harassment by outside agencies."

Man Is Killed In Crash Of Truck-Train

Plattsmouth (AP) — A Fremont man died Wednesday when the pickup truck he was driving was struck by a Burlington Northern freight train two miles north and one-half mile west of here.

Cass County Sheriff Fred Tesch Jr., said Joseph P. Kloewer, 40, was southbound across the track when the vehicle was struck by the eastbound freight.

Tesch said the crash occurred at a crossing on private property.

The sheriff said Kloewer was employed as a foreman by R. E. Reutzel Co., Inc., of Fremont.

Injuries Fatal To Orchard Man

Plainview (AP) — Former Antelope County Commissioner for eight years, Henry Stelling, 71, Orchard, died in a hospital here Tuesday of injuries suffered in a Sept. 1 traffic accident near Weeping Water.

The Nebraska State Patrol identified the victim as Stephan H. Harmon.

The patrol said Mr. Harmon was northbound on Highway 50, two miles west of Weeping Water, attempting a left turn into a driveway, when his auto was in collision with a southbound vehicle driven by Delwin C. Grau, 27, of Ralston.

Grau suffered minor lacerations in the accident, the patrol said.

The patrol said the accident occurred at approximately 6:15 p.m. Friday, and is expected to be added to the Labor Day weekend death count.

Funeral services for Mr. Harmon are scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday in Weeping Water.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday at St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Orchard.

Survivors include his wife, five daughters and a son.

Under provisions of the General Revenue Sharing Bill now in the Senate, Lincoln would receive $2,137,587, while Lancaster County government would receive $926,237.

The Senate Committee on Finance, by a vote of 12 to four, favorably reported the bill which includes a formula by which $5.3 billion in revenue funds would be distributed to state and local governments in 1972.

Under the Senate's proposal each state's share is determined by its population multiplied by its tax effort and further multiplied by its income per capita income.

Unlike the House bill, the Senate Committee for whom a does not favor any particular type of tax system for the states such as personal income taxes but does recognize that general tax effort is a factor which should be considered in any distribution formula for revenue sharing funds, according to the National Association of Counties.

Under the Senate Committee proposal, Nebraska would receive a total of $52 million or $17.5 million more than under the House proposal, which would allow Nebraska $34.5 million.

AROUND TOWN

Judging from all of the things we have heard and can't tell — plus some little delectables we have picked up from here and there and CAN tell, it would appear that the 1972-73 season is to be a gala one.

The football season just seems to inspire activity of a social nature. That is especially true this year when the Cornhuskers, according to the nation's pollsters, well could be the No. 1 team for the third time.

Among the things we can't tell at the moment are the names of those who will be in the stadium when the Cornhuskers and UCLA meet in Los Angeles on Saturday.

But one of the things we can tell this morning has to do with the pre-game brunch on Saturday, Sept. 16, when Texas A&M comes to town.

Hosts and hostesses for the pre-game party are Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Donovan who will be entertaining at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis.

IN suburbia

The long Labor Day weekend provided an excellent opportunity for families with children in school to take that last trip before winter weather sets in. However, those coming to the Lincoln area during the holiday period found that there were many activities within our city to occupy their time.

For example, Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. McAvoy and their children, Charlotte and Scott, entertained a group of relatives at a barbecue at their Eastborough home on Monday afternoon.

The special guest at the affair was Mrs. McAvoy's nephew, John Soflin, who recently returned from Vietnam for a two-week leave. Mr. Soflin, who is serving with the U.S. Navy, will leave Lincoln on Sunday, Sept. 10, for Long Beach, N.Y., where he will board the destroyer U.S.S. Larson, and return to Vietnam.

During his visit in Lincoln, he is the house guest of his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Soflin and their daughter, Kathy, who of course also attended the picnic. Mrs. McAvoy's father, and the guest of honor's grandfather, Carl R. Soflin, was among the guests, as was his daughter, Miss Betty Soflin.

Others attending were Mr. McAvoy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. McAvoy — and we certainly do not want to forget Mrs. McAvoy's brother, Fred Soflin, of Kansas City, Mo., the father of the two Soflin brothers.

After the picnic dinner, all participated in touch football, basketball, chess and swimming.

Mr. and Mrs. David W. Joseph of Eastborough have a guest at their home this week. The visitor is Mr. Joseph's mother, Mrs. Herbert Joseph of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, who arrived on Friday evening, Sept. 1.

Mrs. Joseph plans to stay about two weeks, and we are sure that her grandchildren, Sharon, Rona and Brett, will enjoy her visit.

Chris Ray and James Ray of Del Mar, Calif., have been visiting in the Southbrook Summit area for the summer months, the guests of their grandmother, Mrs. Wauneta Ray, and their father, Webster Ray.

While visiting in Nebraska, the boys accompanied their father to Omaha where they enjoyed several places of interest but also had fun a-plenty in Lincoln where they were fortunate to see the Children's Zoo, the Antelope Zoo and to visit the city's many museums.

The two brothers returned to California on Monday, Sept. 4, with their mother, Mrs. Nancy Ray, who visited friends and relatives in Lincoln for several days after covering the Democratic and Republican conventions in Miami Beach, Fla., for the San Diego paper.

Kimballcrest residents Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wirtz and their children, Terri Lee, Danny, and Toni Marie, spent Wednesday preparing for some very special guests.

Arriving on Wednesday evening were Mr. and Mrs. John Morris and their children, Michelle and David, all of Jacksonville, Fla., who are close friends of the Wirtz family.

It seems that the Morrisses were returning home from their vacation in Minnesota and decided to stop off in Lincoln for a brief visit.

It was just a week or so ago that Mr. and Mrs. Myrl Moon of Park Manor said their goodbyes to some very special weekend guests.

Visiting in the Lincoln area were Mr. Moon's brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Milton Moon, of Silver Spring, Md., and their son and daughter, Jonathon and Elizabeth.

After spending a lovely weekend here, the Easterners headed back to Maryland, arriving just in time for their children to begin their school year.

a sister of the bridegroom, was the bridesmaid.

Andrew Heydinger of Norwalk, Ohio, brother of the bride, served Mr. Werner as best man, and the groomsmen and ushers included Steven Mausbach of Humphrey; Robert Werner of Humphrey, and John Albers of Lincoln.

For her wedding the bride chose a gown of white chiffon, accented with Schiffli embroidery and Venise lace. The lace banded the high collar of the fitted bodice, and ornamented the cuffs of the Camelot sleeves which were capped with the embroidery. The embroidery was repeated to pattern the front of the gown from the high neckline to the hem of the A-line skirt which was bordered with embroidery. The gown was given back interest with an aisle-wide train which extended from Empire height into cotillion length. A crown of pearls held in place her tiered, fingertip veil, and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and gypsophila.

Mr. Werner and his bride will reside at 1351 So. 35th St., in Lincoln.

The bride is a graduate of the Sandusky School of Nursing at Sandusky, Ohio, and now is a member of the nursing staff at Veteran's Hospital. Mr. Werner attended the Nettleton Technical Institute.

Abby: some foolish rules

DEAR ABBY: Here are a few simple rules, which, if followed, could save our nation:

1. The man should be the head of the family. His wife should stay home and look after the children.

2. A married man should get preference for a job over a single man.

3. Married women should give up their jobs to married men.

4. A child should never come home from school to an empty house.

5. There should be radio and television blackouts every day from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. so families could talk to each other and bridge the generation gap. Very truly yours,

FOR A STRONGER AMERICA

DEAR FOR: Re Number 1: How about families in which there is no man? Or if the wife's energies and talents extend beyond child tending? Or where there are no children at all?

2. Why should a man be penalized because he has chosen to remain single? Job opportunities should be based on ability, not marital status.

3. Why? Some married women must carry the same financial load as married men.

4. Working mothers can't always manage to be home before their children.

5. What ever happened to freedom of choice?

DEAR ABBY: What would you think of a husband who after being married over a year still locks all his belongings up in cedar closets? There is nobody else in the house but me.

Also, he gets all his mail at his sister's house.

What does he have to hide?

BEWILDERED IN CONN.

DEAR BEWILDERED: I would be more concerned about what he imagines he has to hide, than what he actually has. He's behaving like a sick man. Urge him to see a doctor.

Opening lead — eight of hearts.

The Aces got the worst of this deal, which featured good play by both declarers. With Lawrence and Goldman North-South for the U.S., they reached three notrump and Garozzo led a heart.

Goldman went up with the king and, in view of the bidding placed West with shortage in both minors. Accordingly, he cashed the queen of diamonds at trick two, followed next by the ten. It did not matter whether or not East covered; in either case Goldman was bound to make four diamond tricks.

However, Goldman was fighting a losing cause, since all he could do was score eight tricks and go down one.

When Avarelli and Belladonna — playing the Precision Club — were North-South for Italy at the other table, the bidding went:

East South West North
Pass 1 NT 2 ♦ 3 NT

The two diamond overcall guaranteed both majors and Belladonna took full advantage of the artificial bid by also leading the Q-10 of diamonds. But Belladonna made the contract because West's opening lead at this table was the ten of spades. He won in dummy with the jack, and he could not now be stopped from scoring a ninth trick with the king of hearts.

BOOKS- "The Tomb Of Tutankhamen"

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON

"I suppose most excavators would confess to a feeling of awe — embarrassment almost — when they break into a chamber closed and sealed by pious hands so many centuries ago. For the moment, time as a factor in human life has lost its meaning. Three thousand, four thousand years maybe, have passed and gone since human feet last trod the floor on which you stand, and yet, as you note the signs of recent life around you — the half-filled bowl of mortar for the door, the blackened lamp, the finger-mark upon the freshly painted surface, the farewell garland dropped upon the threshold — you feel it might have been yesterday. The very air you breathe, unchanged throughout the centuries, you share with those who laid the mummy to its rest. Time is annihilated by little intimate details such as these, and you feel an intruder."

With these words, archaeologist Howard Carter describes, in retrospect, the feelings that overwhelmed him as he gazed for the first time into one of the inner chambers of the tomb of the Egyptian pharaoh, Tutankhamen. Discovered during an expedition led by Carter in 1922, the tomb proved to be one of the most significant finds in archaeological history, yielding a cache of ancient artifacts more complete than any other found in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

Carter's account of the epochal discovery, as told in the recently-released book, "The Tomb Of Tutankhamen" (E. P. Dutton) is an immensely compelling story which, at times, goes beyond the realm of archaeological endeavor, and touches fleetingly on the timelessness of the human condition. Enhancing the text is a series of photographs taken by Harry Burton of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City during various phases of the excavation; and 16 pages of color plates which show the artifacts as they may be seen today.

The author, who died in 1939, offers a detailed description of the arduous work which preceded and followed the discovery of the tomb; and of the various treasures contained therein. With measured excitement he tells of finding, after six fruitless seasons of excavation, the stairway leading down into the multi-chambered sepulcher; and of opening the series of sealed doorways that led into the burial shrine which contained the mummified remains of the boyish king.

The painstaking nature of the archaeologist's work is brought to light as Carter tells of the measures taken by members of the expedition in an effort to preserve and catalogue the hundreds of articles placed in the tomb some 3,000 years before.

Beyond the actual discovery of and work in the tomb, Carter also reconstructs, to as great an extent as possible, the history of the Valley of the Kings, and speculates about the life of Tutankhamen. The young ruler's brief reign (from all indications, he died at the approximate age of 18) is still shrouded with mystery, although Carter's discovery added considerable evidence to the store of relevant historical data.

The aspect of the book that renders it most appealing however, is the author's "personalization" of his account — his ability to verbalize his feeling of kinship with the shadowy individuals of an age long past yet somehow quite near. He speculates about the origin of a tiny wreath of flowers placed on the forehead of the dead king. ". . . as it pleased us to think, the last farewell offering of the widowed girl queen to her husband." And, as he continues, he eloquently constructs, for a moment at least, a bridge that spans the ages and joins together the whole of mankind:

"Among all that regal splendour, that royal magnificence — everywhere the glint of gold — there was nothing so beautiful as those few withered flowers, still retaining their tinge of colour. They told us what a short period three thousand three hundred years really was — but Yesterday and the Morrow. In fact, that touch of nature made that ancient and our modern civilization kin."

Know Your Antiques

The tin taxi driver of this tin cab seems to enjoy the trip to the station. It was made in Germany about 1910. (National Arts and Antiques Festival, New York City, N.Y.)

By RALPH AND
TERRY KOVEL

The automobile may have been important to those first brave owners, but the general public seems to have ignored the car from the first automobile race in Europe in 1894 to about 1900. As cars began to gain in popularity, the toy automobile was made in varied designs.

"Penny toys" from Germany were made of tab-and-slot joined, colored tin to show autos, trucks, buses and fire engines. Expensive soldered tin cars with upholstered seats and attractive passengers were made.

Cast iron cars were popular in the United States. Cars would toot, steer or make motor noises with the help of a clockwork windup arrangement.

Children did not recognize car models as well as they do today. Until about the 1920s, manufacturers could make the same bus for sale in France, England, or Germany as long as the wording on the side was in the correct language.

One popular 1910 German toy was a limousine made with railway carriage doors and beveled glass. A trunk was on the roof. The driver even had a side brake to keep the wound up car from moving before it should. It sold in France, England, Germany and United States.

Q—A neighbor and I own the same type of old-fashioned wooden potato masher. They are the only two that we have ever seen. My neighbor's dates back to her great-grandparents.

A—Take your neighbor's age and add 25 years for each generation, or 75 years. Her masher would date in the late 19th century.

Potato mashers have been used in America for centuries. The 18th century kitchen used mashers for potatoes, for vegetables such as squash, for tamping butter or cabbage in sauerkraut and for grinding herbs and spices.

The early mashers were made of wood and carved by hand. Maple or other hard woods were usually used. A potato masher improvement appeared and wooden handles with metal heads were used. These were either iron or tin.

The masher was a common household tool. It can still be found at almost every antique sale. It is not rare but selected designs are of interest.

Q—How is a "bathing doll" different from a "frozen charlotte"?

A—The first "bathing dolls" or in German "badekinder" were often called frozen charlotte in the United States. They were made about 1850.

These were solid china dolls. The arms were usually bent at the elbow. They had clenched fists, straight legs and large abdomens.

The dolls were sold naked. When they were dirty, they could be washed. It must have been difficult to keep from dropping the larger versions in the soapy water.

Boy and girl dolls were made with the only difference the style of the hair cut. The dolls came in glazed and unglazed.

Revenue Sharing Formula Favoring Big States Loses

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday overwhelmingly defeated a proposed substitute revenue sharing formula that would have favored major urban states in the allocation of nearly $35 billion during the next five years.

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., was beaten, 24 to 61, over his complaint that the distribution formula contained in the Senate Finance Committee bill would discriminate against the more populous states and favor rural areas.

Under Ribicoff's formula, a state's revenue sharing grants would be computed on the basis of its tax revenues, per capita income, total population and urbanized population.

Long said in drafting the bill the committee followed the principle that "the poorer you are the more help you will get."

Ribicoff argued that it was in the urbanized states, where the cities had "their backs to the wall," that federal revenue sharing was needed most.

Under Ribicoff's plan, for example, New York would have received $723.2 million in the first year. Under the committee bill it would have gotten $596.9 million.

Amendment Offered

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., offered an amendment that would require the administration to submit preliminary tax reform plans to Congress by Oct. 31, with a final plan due by March 31, 1973.

If a major revenue sharing program is to be implemented, Kennedy said, "it is especially important that those tax revenues be collected fairly from all the people."

Long's committee added $1 billion a year to the $29.8 billion House-approved revenue sharing measure to finance state "social services" programs for welfare recipients.

Both Senate and House versions, however, would require that the states distribute at least two-thirds of their shares to the cities.

Keith F. School New Treasurer Of Hall County

Grand Island (AP) — Keith F. School, 47, presently in sales work for Johnson Cashway Lumber Co., Grand Island, was named Hall County treasurer Wednesday.

He was appointed by the board to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Mabel Petersen, who resigned effective Sept. 15 after 31 years in the treasurer's office, six of them as treasurer. The term ends in 1974.

The board also named Bernard C. Harders, Wood River farmer-feeder, to the Hall County Airport Authority to serve until November. He succeeds L. W. Kelly Jr., who was appointed a district judge.

"The administration is trying to have it both ways," he said. "It's their own fault."

Mansfield made his remarks after trying unsuccessfully to persuade Jackson and Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to agree to debate limitation and set a time for voting.

Jackson said he was willing to agree to a limitation on his own and other amendments if a deadline for a final vote on the resolution was included.

Fulbright said he would not enter into a "package agreement" that would abridge the Senate's freedom-of-debate rule.

Mansfield sought to get things moving by moving to table his own amendment endorsing a declaration of principles signed by President Nixon and Soviet party chairman Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow May 29. In that declaration both countries pledged efforts to avoid war and a desire not to seek unilateral advantage.

The motion to table was rejected 52 to 31 and the Mansfield amendment remained the Senate's pending business as it has been since Aug. 11.

In a Senate speech, Jackson said the five-year interim agreement will enable the Russians to increase its numerical superiority over the United States in land and sea-based intercontinental ballistic missiles and in "throw weight" warhead deliverability.

His amendment, he said, as a guideline for the future, will urge U.S. negotiators to seek equality in any long-term treaty.

70% Of Job Safety Checks Find Violations

Washington (UPI) — The Labor Department said Wednesday it found violations of federal job safety and health regulations in 70% of such investigations the past year.

"The violations resulted in proposed penalties totaling $2,291,000," it added. Employes initiated total of 4,950 of the complaints, the report said.

George C. Guenther, assistant secretary of labor and head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, said in the report that the greatest number of inspections and citations were in heavily industrialized states and some southern states.

THE PADDOCKBy Mark Gordon
Star Sports WriterStill In Horses

Madison Downs is still alive.

Not with thoroughbred horse racing as changing economic conditions and a gradual population decline forced the Nebraska State Racing Commission to refuse to grant the northeast Nebraska track racing dates this year... but with a rodeo.

The State Rodeo Association has given Madison Downs the 1972 State Championship Rodeo, set for Sept. 16-17 on an experimental basis.

"We're hoping to be successful in this venture this year and that it will be a permanent home for the state championship rodeo," says Morris Moyer, Madison Downs' general manager. "In fact, we've converted our area to a rodeo grounds rather than a horse racing plant."

In past years, this would be the first week of Madison racing — a short 2-3 week stop at a track known for its community involvement and pleasant, friendly country surroundings. But despite being in operation since Nebraska legalized horse racing in 1936, Madison lost money the last four years.

"I don't think we're going to ask for racing dates again," Moyer says. "One of the big problems is that industry is in a tough situation — in fact, the economy is in a tough time — and even Omaha was down a little this year."

'Pure Gamble'

"I question if this area with its small population and somewhat far removed from the population centers could profitably support a race meet," he continues. "It would be a pure gamble to attempt it again."

One idea, which Moyer says has been discussed for the past five years was to conduct a split season with Madison running at the same time Lincoln or Omaha (Ak-Sar-Ben) were conducting their race meetings. Moyer said the consensus opinion felt it would not be successful.

Discounting rumors that Madison would request quarterhorse racing dates for 1973, Moyer noted that the stretch run distance of less than 300 yards would be inadequate for quarterhorses. He added that running past the finish line is complicated by a "tight turn" which would present problems to the swift sprinters.

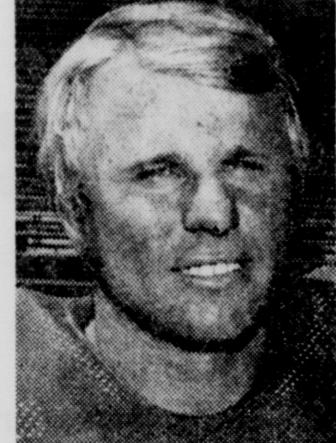

A group including Elmer Richter of Aurora of the Nebraska Quarterhorse Association and Denny Smith, then the executive secretary of the American Quarterhorse Association, inspected the Madison facilities in March. But Moyer says the expenses involved in converting the track into a suitable plant for quarterhorses were prohibitive.

"Another problem is that we always had a fall racing program," Moyer says. "And fall racing is not the most profitable time to have racing. It seems to be the trend that from Labor Day on, you aren't as successful as during the summer."

But the townspeople have discussed the absence of the ponies and the tremendous surge in activity when the races were held.

"There's always sadness in a town this size, when we lose something we've had for so long," Moyer says. "This is a little sleeping town that really woke up for those three weeks or so each year."

"The races were a community project that was a definite economic lift to the town," he adds. "Things don't look too bright for us to reopen with horse racing, but we're all hoping that our new activity (rodeo) will be a fine replacement."

'ENOUGH DRILLS WITHOUT PLAYING GAME'Devaney Says Need For Tilt Outweighs More PracticesBy HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

Nebraska football coach Bob Devaney Wednesday declared the need for his Huskers to play a game outweighed the need for more days on the practice field.

While still stressing that his 1972 squad may not be as ready for the season opener as was last year's team because of inexperience at several positions, including quarterback, Devaney observed, "We've practiced about long enough without playing a game — from a morale standpoint."

"There are a lot of things we had hoped to get done in practice which we haven't, but we need to play against someone other than teammates."

Devaney explained that because of the inexperience, the coaching staff had cut down on the things the Huskers will be doing, particularly on offense, but added, "However, we've got a complete offense and a complete defense, so we're not going to be short-changed."

The Husker coach said he was hopeful his offense could get off to a good start as a confidence booster.

"I don't think our offense has quite as much confidence in itself as last year's team," he pointed out, "because we've got some players who are starting for the first time."

Loss Of Starters No Longer Cause For Despair At K-State

... GIBSON BUILDS PURPLE PRIDE PROGRAM TO POINT WHERE ADEQUATE REPLACEMENTS AVAILABLE

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — There was a time, not long ago, when the departure of half the starting football team at Kansas State sent a beleaguered coach sifting through rookies and rejects searching for replacements.

Happily, that day is past for Vince Gibson and his Purple Pride program at K-State.

"You can't take a program that was this bad," Gibson said in an interview, "and win right off."

K-State had won five games in five years when Gibson took the job. The Cats have won 21 games in his five-year tenure.

"We're getting back up now to where we can lose a lot of kids and still compete. We're at the plateau now that we can play the best teams in America and compete."

Gibson, starting his sixth season as head coach of the Wildcats, opens the 1972 season against Tulsa here Saturday afternoon with 11 starters missing from last year's team which won five games and lost six, but finished strong.

He feels he has capable replacements for those who are gone, and he can't wait for the debut.

"We're probably the best football team we've been at Kansas State since I've been here," Gibson said. "I think we're at the level where we've got our team built up in numbers. We're a big football team in numbers."

"We're getting built up to play where we don't have to play young kids any more. We've got a little more depth."

However, Gibson is realistic enough to know that what Kansas State now has, compared to four or five years ago, "may not be good enough" to improve substantially on its record in 1972.

"The difference is that we don't have a great senior class, like Oklahoma and Nebraska do," he said. Gibson expects to start nine seniors, 11 juniors and two sophomores against Tulsa.

"We're a junior club," he added. "I think I counted 45 juniors. But we also have 46 players who were redshirted at one time or another, so we're getting built up."

Gibson, whose Purple Pride motto has been, "We're gonna win," said he feels no particular pressure to win more games. He doesn't believe the Kansas State attitude now is, "we've gotta win."

The Big Eight Conference, boasting the likes of Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado, is the reason for Gibson's realistic outlook when he talks won-loss records.

"There is no doubt this is the greatest conference in America," he said. "To win the conference championship, you've got to win the national championship. We play half our games against the best teams in America."

"I don't think anybody knows how many games they're going to win. You don't know about injuries. There are so many intangibles."

Commission Schedules Open House

It will be "show and tell" time at Game and Parks Commission offices across Nebraska on Sept. 23, as the state's conservation and outdoor recreation agency opens its doors to the public on National Hunting and Fishing Day.

Commission offices in Lincoln, Norfolk, Bassett, Alliance, and North Platte will hold open house from 2 to 4:30 p.m. that day, serving refreshments, conducting tours, and answering questions on the agency's policies and functions.

The welcome mat will be out all, whether hunters and fishermen or not. Commission personnel will field questions about hunting, fishing, camping, boating, state parks and recreation areas, ecology, and all phases of conservation and outdoor recreation in Nebraska.

Attractions at the Commission's central office in Lincoln will include a display of wildlife portraits by C. G. "Bud" Pritchard, the Game Commission artist who produces the popular fauna series in NEBRASKAland Magazine. In addition, there will be continuous showings of several films of interest to ecology-minded Nebraskans.

At the Alliance, Bassett, and North Platte offices, visitors will witness first hand the operation of a big-game check station. Dozens of hunters will be bringing in antelope that day, the opener of the state's firearm season on pronghorns.

The Commission's open house is part of an observance across the state and nation on Hunting and Fishing Day. President Nixon declared September 23 National Hunting and Fishing Day, and Governor Exon followed up with a proclamation for an observance on the state level.

Hunting and Fishing Day is meant to focus public attention on the contributions of outdoor recreation. The President's proclamation recognized "the many and worthwhile contributions of the American hunter and angler" and urged citizens to "join with outdoor sportsmen in the wise use of our natural resources and insuring their proper management for future generations."

Governor Exon's proclamation called attention to the fight to preserve outdoor resources, led by hunters and fishermen long before conservation became fashionable. He also lauded sportsmen for the many wildlife and outdoor recreation areas purchased with their money, which are open to all the public.

NU Letterman Services Slated

Diamond Bar, Calif. — Funeral services will be held in Lincoln Friday at 9 a.m. at Hodgeman-Splain-Roberts Mortuary for former Nebraska football player Charles (Chick) Story.

He died here last Saturday at the age of 48. A 1941 graduate of Lincoln's Jackson High School, he went on to Nebraska to earn varsity letters in both football and basketball.

He played quarterback two years and blocking back two years for the Cornhuskers from 1945-48. Rosary will be recited at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Hodgeman-Splain-Roberts.

Lincoln high schools, however, do not sponsor team activity in girls tennis, pointed out Horne.

If the three Capital City schools would have allowed the girls to try out this fall, he said, "there would have been no penalty against the individual students."

"But," he added, "a penalty would have been assessed by the NSAA against the coach and school involved. And it openers across the state, we foresee two coaches losing a part of the state's longest winning streaks.

One should end at York where defending state Class C champion David City plays. Dave Montag, who coached Dix to 32 consecutive wins before moving to David City, will find a lot of difference in the level of competition.

The other streak should end in the state's feature eight-man game. John O'Brien, who has coached Shelby to 20 straight wins, will bow to Gresham in a key Crossroads Conference contest at Shelby.

Kearney's invasion of Hastings may be the state's top Class A conflict. We think Hastings' speed will be the decisive factor in the interdivisional battle of expected Big 10 Conference powers.

Among interesting matchups elsewhere we see: Cozad over Aurora; Omaha Westside over Bellevue; Seward over Central City; Ogallala over Grant; Gretna over Waverly; Minden over Lexington; Beatrice over Norfolk; Omaha South over Omaha North; Wahoo over Schuyler.

The three Lincoln girls who were denied a chance to try out for boys tennis teams last week were Lita Smith of Northeast, Mary Hall of Southeast and Anne Schleiger of East.

"The reason for denying them that privilege," pointed out Horne, "is that there is a separate season sanctioned by the NSAA for girls tennis."

"It prohibits members of the opposite sex competing on the same team or against each other," he noted. "And despite the ruling on Miss Reed's case, it's still in effect."

Apparently, according to Horne, there has been some confusion about the eligibility of girls competing in high school tennis this fall.

"We've had three girls investigate the possibility of competing with and against the boys," he explained, "but we've found out from the Nebraska Schools Activities Association (NSAA) that it would be in violation of its rules."

The confusion of girls' status in boys' sports may be traced to Debbie Reed's receiving permission to participate on the Norfolk High School golf team last spring, said Horne.

"Some people may have thought her case had set a legal precedent," he noted, "but it was an individual matter of the court granting her an injunction to participate."

Golf Tourney At Hastings Scheduled

Hastings — Midwest golfers get their final opportunity to challenge par in the KHAS-TV Indian Summer Open Golf Tourney, scheduled for Hastings at Hastings Lochland Country Club Oct. 7-8.

Lochland professional Bud Williamson Jr. said the final event on Nebraska's golf calendar will again offer divisions for both professionals and amateurs.

First place in this year's pro division will receive one year's free use of a new Chevrolet Monte Carlo, a prize estimated in value at $2200. Cash prizes will be paid to remaining professionals who place in the tournament. Use of the automobile is being donated by Kizzier Chevrolet of Kearney.

Amateurs will be shooting for the maximum $200 in merchandise and flights will be available for all golfers. The Indian Summer is the final event which will be used to determine Nebraska's Amateur Golfer of the Year. Williamson said all Nebraskans competing in the amateur division must be members of the Nebraska Amateur Golf Association, or join prior to playing.

Mike Morley, a touring professional from Arizona, is defending champion in the professional division. Ron Moore of Denver was last year's amateur winner in a sudden-death playoff with Nebraskan Dan Bahansky from St. Paul.

Sergeant Claims 200 Involved

. . . IN FALSIFYING REPORTS ON RAIDS INTO NO. VIETNAM

The New York Times

Orlando, Fla. — A young Air Force sergeant who first reported the unauthorized bombing of North Vietnam took issue Wednesday with the Air Force contention that Gen. John D. Lavelle acted alone and said more than 200 men were involved in falsely reporting the raids.

Lavelle was relieved in March as commander of the 7th Air Force.

No other officer has been punished in connection with the incident and Air Force spokesmen have repeatedly told newsmen both in Washington and Saigon that "investigations have revealed that Gen. Lavelle alone was responsible for the air raids."

Sgt. Lonnie D. Franks, 23, an intelligence specialist whose second one-year tour of duty in Thailand ended last week, said during a four-hour interview at his home here that pilots and officers stationed at Udon Air Base in Thailand spent up to three hours daily falsifying the highly classified after-action reports before routinely sending them to higher headquarters.

"Everybody knew we were falsifying these reports," the sergeant said. "Everybody was doing it. I kept on saying 'why' and they said, 'that's the way we do it.'"

Both the advance planning for the raids and the actual results were reported orally and in secret cablegrams to a high-ranking general stationed at Lavelle's Seventh Air Force headquarters in Saigon, Franks said.

Senate sources said that the sergeant is expected to testify at Senate Armed Services Committee hearings this month about the Lavelle matter.

55 Strikes

Franks, who has 11 more months to serve in the Air Force, asserted during the interview that more than 75 illegal "protective reaction" strikes — three times as many as were publicly acknowledged by Lavelle during a congressional hearing in June — were staged by aircraft stationed at Udon.

"The only reason I waited so long before doing something was that I honestly thought somebody else would do it," Franks added. "I was the lowest ranking guy there."

Frank's account of elaborate false reporting was subsequently confirmed by an Air Force officer who served with him at Udon. "All I can say is, yes, we did it," said the officer, who requested anonymity, in a telephone interview Wednesday. "But I didn't like what I was doing."

"I was right in the middle of it," the officer added. "It was kind of a shock. I was just doing what I was supposed to do."

The officer said that Franks rated as "one of my better workers," adding: "I trusted him more than anybody else."

Told that it was the sergeant's letter that prompted the investigation, the officer said, "I didn't have the gumption to write one myself."

Wrote To Sen. Hughes

Franks was assigned in August, 1971, to the intelligence office of the 432d Technical Reconnaissance Wing at Udon. On Feb. 25, 1972, he wrote to Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, telling of the unauthorized raids.

Hughes forwarded the letter to Air Force officials and within three weeks the Air Force inspector general had completed an on-the-spot investigation in Thailand. It was determined, as Gen. John D. Ryan, the Air Force chief of staff, said at a House hearing in June, that 20 to 28 illegally ordered raids against truck depots, airfields and oil stockpiles in North Vietnam had been made and three reports falsified. The raids began in November, Ryan testified, and ended in March — shortly after the letter from Franks was acted upon.

In the interview, however, Franks said he first began knowingly falsifying reports on Jan. 25, 1972, in connection with his job as an intelligence sergeant. At the time, he was responsible for preparing daily commander's briefings and also for debriefing pilots and navigators after their missions.

Throughout February, Franks said, the illegal missions settled into a fixed pattern, with 16 planes assigned to escort force reconnaissance craft over their objectives in North Vietnam — four times as many as usual.

The aircraft would then attack enemy targets and the operations would be reported as "protective reaction," the sergeant said.

"The easiest way to tell if it was a pre-planned strike was to see how many escorts there were," Franks said. "If you send up 16 birds to escort one recce (reconnaissance flight), well" — the sergeant ended the sentence with a shrug.

Started Shooting

After a week or two," he recounted, "the North Vietnamese started shooting when they saw that second flight of four."

From Jan. 25 until early March, Franks said, when the false reporting was stopped — apparently as a result of his letter — the daily procedure for receiving targeting orders for North Vietnam was changed.

Instead of coming by top-secret telegraph communications, the sergeant said, target information was provided by secure telephone communications from 7th Air Force headquarters. In response to repeated questions, Franks said, Murray of the intelligence office told him that the orders came from Gen. Alton D. Slay, deputy Air Force chief of staff for operations in Southeast Asia.

Both Slay and Murray have since denied any connection with the false reports, Air Force sources said.

The net result of all the fraud, the sergeant added, was confusion. "For a while, nobody really knew what was false and what was true," he said.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE Here's How to Work It
One letter simply stands for another in this example. A is used for the three L's X for the two O's etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key name. Start the left-to-right, bottom-to-top of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers given to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.

DID YOU KNOW THIS? IT'S A FACT:

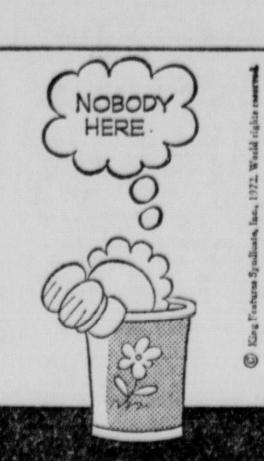

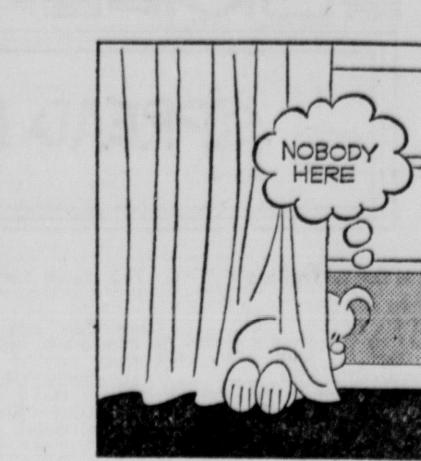

West Virginia ranks 47th in the nation in income per capita—$2,600. Only Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi rank below the Mountain State.

Seasons on Mars are about double the length of those on earth.

Hakodate, the chief seaport on the northern Japanese island of Hokkaido, was founded in the 13th century. It was a small fishing village which became a port after Matthew Perry visited in 1854 and observed that Hakodate boasted one of the finest natural harbors in the world.

In 1872 Yellowstone National Park became a national park and the world's first big public wildlife refuge.

The U.S. Mint in Denver issued its first coins in 1906.
